The World War II era was a tumultuous time for car manufacturers, but produced some truly exemplary models, including the Volkswagen Beetle, the Ford V-8 and the MG T series, among others. The 1950s was exciting for car manufacturers. Post-war American designs have become more elegant and models like Ferrari have gained popularity abroad. Learn about Bentleys and Rolls Royce models up to the Jeep models of the 1950s. Have you ever met one of these people who can identify the make, model and year of every classic car they see? Would you like to become an expert on classic cars too? There are many beautiful old cars on the road and with the right practice and approach, you will be an expert in no time. Identify the range of classic car dates. Veteran cars were manufactured before 1903, old cars were manufactured between 1903 and 1933, and classic cars are considered vehicles manufactured from 1933 until fifteen years ago. Watch classic car shows and exhibitions. These are great places to see a variety of classic cars up close and meet other enthusiasts. Most exhibits will separate classic cars from old and muscular cars, so by visiting professional car shows, you'll start to identify the difference yourself. Narrow the field. You can already have a favorite make and model. Take this manufacturer and start looking at your models year after year. For example, search for Ford Mustangs and the differences made each year, try to name the year of each Mustang you see on the road. When you start this, or get bored, choose another manufacturer, model or year to study. Write down the features of each car you are working to identify. Does the car have a grille or shape of rear light? Note the finite details on the rear fins, race plates, rear view mirrors, hubcaps, tires and interior décor. Practice, practice, practice. It's not hard to pick a classic car out of the crowd, so when you see one casually, try to identify the make and the model. So try reading the badges when you stop next to it, or go through it, or better yet, ask the owner, hey, is this a 1973 Ford Mustang? Classic cars captivate us with their beauty, rarity and engineering, with the memories they evoke, the story they capture. The articles collected here feature concise and authoritative profiles of more than 400 american and imported classic cars built from 1930 to 2000. The largest imperials, Lincolns and Packards are just some of the unquestioned American classics represented. Bentley, Bugatti and Rolls Royce are among the many immortals of the outstanding import brand. These articles also embrace large cars that move out of the most exalted circles. Then you will read about the Kaiser-Darrin DKF161 from 1954, 1955 Chrysler C300, 1959 Studebaker Silver Hawk, and others in good faith. Classic cars can also be modern favorites, and can even be cars celebrated for their peculiar individuality. That's why we've included articles on recent gems like the Acura NSX 1990-2000, 1990-2000, BMW M3, and Ford Taurus SHO 1992-1995. That's also why we recognize eccentricities as delicious as the Edsel Pacer of 1958, 1951 Henry J DeLuxe, and 1954-1956 Nash Metropolitan. Each article puts the subject car in its historical context, and describes the qualities that make it a classic. Attributes such as performance or style are included in a list of pluses. Deficits such as build quality or propensity to rust are counted among its minuses. A vital key to classic and collectible status - the number of each built car - is listed in a production roundup, while useful graphics list vehicle dimensions, weights and price when new. Details about engines, their power and the years in which they were available are also provided. To make your trip easier, we split these classic cars alphabetically by manufacturer, and separately by decade. Start your ride into the world of classic cars on the next page. Want more information about classic cars? See: Classic Cars C-D Ad Content features a rich collection of great cars of all time. No list of classic cars would be complete without the 1930s Cadillac Sixteen. Meet that magnificent Cadillac V-16, elegant postwar beauties like the 1948 Cadillac Series Sixty-Two convertible, and the cool Camelot of the 1961 Cadillac Eldorado Biarritz. Chrysler had its day in the classic sun with luminaries like the charming Chrysler Town & Country Newport of 1950 and the handsome Virgil Exner-style Chrysler New Yorker of 1955. Check out these and other Chrysler landmarks, including the grandfather of American muscle cars, the Hemi-powered 1955 Chrysler C-300. Surprise, surprise, the interest of collectors is growing for the DeLorean DMC-12 from 1981 to 1982. This is the famous non-aluminum aluminum sports car as the Back to the Future time machine. Meet this unique car and its controversial creator, John Z. DeLorean. Also the product of a single vision, that of self-transport contractor Eugene Casaroll - but a much better car than the DeLorean, was the glorious 1956-1958 Dual-Ghia. Find out why Frank Sinatra wanted one of those fast, expensive, doomed American cars. See: Advertising Classic Cars from the 1950s can be anything from opulent to odd, as you'll see when connecting to cars in the chart below. The most remembered classic cars of the 1950s, such as the 1956 Cadillac Eldorado Biarritz, symbolized America's turbulent optimism when it emerged victorious from World War II and raced into a new era of consumerism and international influence. Others, such as the 1955 DeSoto Fireflite Coronado, brought brilliance and power to the masses. And some, like the 1958 Edsel Ranger, came to symbolize the 1950s style gone wrong. Classic cars from the 1950s weren't limited to the U.S., of course. Meet England's 1952-1955 Bentley R-Type, Italy's 1953 Fiat 1100TV, Sweden's 1958 Saab and other major 1950s cars from around the world. For more on these and other classic cars from the 1950s, see: Want more information about classic cars? See: Image: Wiki Commons by Softies Com more 100 years of car manufacturing behind us, and literally thousands of cars to choose from, which you find the most popular of all can it be? How would you choose? What makes a car stand the test of time more than its competitors? There are so many factors, some of them easy to understand, such as the power and performance of the Chevy Camaro, and others less easy to understand, such as the peculiar appearance of the timeless Chevy El Camino. Fortunately for us, several classic car sites have accounted for data over the years based on car sales, online car searches and user survey data to determine which classics among thousands and thousands you could choose to be the most popular. While it's very easy to guess that a car like a Dodge Charger or a Pontiac Trans Am has a special place in the hearts and minds of drivers across the country, there are definitely some surprises you may not have seen coming. But if you're an expert on absolute classic cars or just someone who once saw a 1964 Mustang and fell in love with power and style, why not take a look and see which ones are the most popular of all time? According to Hemmings, the classic car auction site, Chevy Corvettes is one of America's most popular classic cars based on how often they are listed for sale. Classic Corvettes are the number one car in many states, and it makes sense. You're not called America's sports car for no reason, right? They have been in production since 1953, and they weren't that popular at first. In fact, Chevy almost canceled the Corvette, which just shows that you can't predict which car will become popular at first glance. When it comes to muscle car searches by state, the Ford Mustang is on the search list of everyone across the country. Based on data compiled from ClassicCars.com, Mustangs are at the top of the list in at least 14 states. This can range from the 1965 Mustang in Washington to the 1969 Ford Mustang Mach 1 in Montana to the 1971 Mustang in Louisiana. These cars are huge everywhere. Believe it or not, but one of the most popular classic cars in Wyoming is the MG TD. This is obscure that many people have not heard of before, but it is worth checking out. Produced from 1950 to 1954, the MG TD is an exceptional old-fashioned British-style car. About 24,000 of them were exported to the United States from the United Kingdom during its production. You should be able to pick one up in excellent condition for less than $30,000. Few classics are as iconic as the Ford Thunderbird, one of the most recognizable cars of the 1950s. When you take Corvettes and Mustangs out of sales at Hemmings, Thunderbird becomes the number one classic people are interested in. Ford began producing Thunderbird in 1955. When Ford added a second row of seats to the T-Bird in 1958, it essentially created the personal luxury car segment. The Chevy Bel Air was made from 1950 until 1975 in the USA, with six more years in Canada. O Bel Air in 1950 was a convertible with an undetectable hardtop, which was revolutionary in its world. Such cars existed before, but none cared. Bel Air was the only one that set the standard and created a style that lasted generations. Few cars have endured over the years as the Porsche 911. In production since 1963, over a million of these cars have been made so far, so you can get a new model if you want, but the classic 911 is what you really want. The 911 was ranked 5th in a 1999 survey of the biggest cars of the century, and was also named number three in the best sports cars of the 1960s by Sports Car International. When some people go to classic cars, they go to very classic cars. The Ford Model A is a favorite among collectors across the country, even more so than its much more famous cousin, the Model T. Model A was Ford's first race in the manufacture of an automobile, and dates back to 1903. Burns in The Simpsons drives one of these once in a while. The Pontiac Firebird Trans Am probably never would have been as popular as it was if it weren't for Smokey and the Bandit. This hood emblazoned with a phoenix only attracts the eyes of the beret, and the 1977 Trans Am is what people most desire thanks to Burt Reynolds. Ironically, the Trans Am wasn't really such a powerful car, but sometimes the look is more important. Next to the Corvette, the most popular classic Chevy is definitely the Camaro. Introduced in 1967 as competition for the Ford Mustang, these pony cars have always looked and presented themselves as nothing else. In particular, the 1969 Chevy Camaro Z/28 is a highlight as a defining muscle car of the time. The 69's style was only available for a year and offered faster steering, racing stripes, headlamps and more. You may not think of Ford Broncos when you think of the classics. Still, it's best to believe that many people believe, especially in Colorado, according to Hemmings, where it is the most popular model after Mustangs and Corvettes. The Bronco was in production from 1965 to 1996, and then Ford brought it back to 2020. These early Broncos were some of the first SUVs on the market and are highly sought after. The Chevy Impala began life as a trim package on the Chevy Bel Air in 1958, and was a big hit in its first year out. In fact, even during a recession, Chevy sold so many Bel Air Impalas that first year the company took first place for sales. Throughout the 60s and 70s, they continued to be remarkably popular, and nowadays years like the Impala of 1963 and 1965 are highly sought after. If you have a passion for classic luxury cars, then you have a passion for Cadillacs. And if you have a passion for Cadillacs, then you have to be an Eldorado fan. This car had Bentley Turbo R isn't as old as some classics, as they date back to 1985, but this is still old enough to qualify as a bit of vintage talent. When Hemmings checked the most popular car with private sellers after eliminating Corvettes and Mustangs, it turned out that the Turbo R is the most listed car in the state of Mississippi. Just over 7,200 of these cars were produced, and Motor Trend called them the first Bentley in decades worthy of the famous name. The Packard Clipper is definitely a second-look car, even if it doesn't have as much love as the Cadillacs and Fords of old. Introduced just months before the attack on Pearl Harbor, it seemed doomed from the start and not timed well to launch on the market, but that didn't stop it from being one of the most popular classics in the state of Alaska. Oldsmobile introduced the 88 in 1949. It was named to fit between models 76 and 98 and has been manufactured for half a century. No car has been in production for 50 years without having any charm. From 1949 to 1951, the Oldsmobile 88 was a highlight with its high-compression V8 overhead valve that was extremely advanced at the time and made the 88 a performance beast when compared to others on the road. Mg's MGB was made by the British Motor Corporation from 1963 until 1968 and then by British Leyland thereafter. One of the most classic British sports cars of the time, it was also one of the first to rely on landslide zones to try to give drivers a little extra safety on the road. Despite their incredible appearance and this desolate zone, it is worth noting that these are not particularly car safe. Any classic car lover has to have a soft spot in his heart for The Dukes of Hazzard, one of the most fun-themed car shows of all time. Bo and Luke Duke drove a 1969 Dodge Charger that was bright orange and emblazoned with the Confederate flag, which most people were fine in the 1980s. Decorative choices aside, the car itself was amazing and inspired many car lovers who have long sought this same model, although they become increasingly rare. The film Breaking Bad was not called Corolla or Prius. His name was El Camino, and that's because the Chevy El Camino has a power to him. Some people thought it was a horrible car, some people thought it was the coolest thing about four wheels, but everyone thought something about it. From 1964 to 1987, this was the half-car, half-pickup truck that made everyone look twice. Strangely, the El Camino was not a truck; he was born from a station wagon, and according to vehicle standards, he qualifies as an SUV. Have you ever seen a 1949 Ford Custom? Favored by hot rodders and Sunday drivers, Ford began production of the Custom in 1949, one of its top-of-the-line cars that had been completely redesigned after World War II. In Connecticut, this is still most sought after classic car on the internet. In 1960, Janet Leigh driving a Ford Custom in the film Psycho, although hers was a model later than the 49. The Ford Fairlane dates back to 1955 and was not actually named for a road or a driving experience or whatever might come to mind when you hear the word Fairlane, but the Henry Ford estate near Dearborn, Michigan. You can always tell a classic Fairlane model from that long stainless steel line down the side that looks like a distended checkmark. Ford has a long history of amazing trucks, perhaps the most amazing of all major manufacturers. When it comes to the classics, though, few will overcome something like the 1935 Ford Pickup, a favorite of classic collectors in places like Idaho, where it is the most sought after classic car model. Why 1935? This was the year that Ford gave its trucks an elegant makeover complete with skirted slats and that really cool curved grid, among other changes. It still looks great after all these years. From 1969 to 1987, Chevy made the Monte Carlo, somewhere between a personal luxury car and a muscle car, depending on the year of production. In the 1970s, they introduced the Monte Carlo SS, the most sporty and powerful option on the road, and even had a decent showing for a period in NASCAR until regulations changed and Monte Carlo's body no longer qualified for the races. No talk about classic cars is complete without a nod to the Pontiac GTO. In 1964, that's where the muscle cars came from. Sure, there were other big block V8s out there before, but nothing as serious and as amazing as the GTO. This was the first real muscle car of the major automakers and one that set the bar for style and performance. If you're a muscle car fan today, you want a GTO. Ford F-series trucks are still the most popular trucks in America to date, so it's no wonder the classics have also stood the test of time. The Ford F-100 dates back to 1948, but if you're looking for a seriously desirable car, you want the final year of production, the 1956 Ford F-100. That was a one-year style with vertical window pillars and the wraparound windshield and even a rear windshield, too, if you wanted to. The Chevy Nova, sometimes known as The New Chevy II, depending on the year of production, was made from 1962 to 1979. The production team absolutely ran through the development, and they say that from the moment they started designing the Nova, it was 18 months later when the first was actually rolling out of the factory. It was not supposed to be a revolutionary car design, but rather a basic, simple automobile, do the job. And people loved it.
